

The Food Literacy Project's mission is youth transforming their communities through food, farming and the land. We offer the only farm-based education program in Louisville. In the past decade, over 45,000 youth have become agents of change, addressing issues of hunger and food justice in underserved Louisville neighborhoods.

Our experiential education programs invite youth, neighbors and community members to experience hands-on activities as they get their hands dirty, taste new foods fresh from the field, and get involved in the work of their community food system and a working farm. Oxmoor Farm and Iroquois Farm are our living classrooms, where we challenge participants through inquiry-based programs that emphasize authentic experiences and utilize all the senses.

Our 10th Annual Field-to-Fork Dinner will be Thursday, August 22rd at The Regency. We invite you to help plant seeds for the future as a sponsor of this unique dining experience. Innovative chefs work with local farms to craft a multi-course, seasonal meal. During the evening, you will learn more about our local food system and how it inspires the chefs.

The event is a celebration of our work and—more importantly—an opportunity to increase our capacity to give young people and their families positive experiences with fresh, healthful food. During the evening you will have the opportunity to meet several of the bright and inspirational youth who have participated in our programs.

Join us and others interested in local food and help us raise $100,000 to support our expansion to Iroquois Urban Farm. Your support is critical to meeting this goal.

In appreciation of your sponsorship, we would like to offer you tickets to our dinner as well as recognition detailed on the enclosed form. We celebrate supporters like you who invest in our work. Together we are building a healthier, more joyful, and more just community.

Thank you in advance for your sponsorship! We look forward to seeing you at our Field-to-Fork Dinner.

Warmly,
